FINANCIAL INFORMATION: CATALYST FOR ECONOMIC INTEGRATION

EXECUTIVE IFRS WORKSHOP FOR REGULATORS

An increasing number of banks, insurance companies and listed companies prepare financial statements in accordance with International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS). Investors, lenders and other stakeholders use information from these financial statements as inputs to inform their economic decisions. They also rely on the reports of the external auditors who audit these financial statements. Financial and audit regulators are responsible for reviewing these financial statements for compliance with the specified accounting and auditing standards.

Reliable reporting by banks and listed companies is critical to financial stability and the development of capital markets in developing countries, for several reasons. IFRS have just undergone significant changes to address issues that arose during the global financial crisis. Bank regulators need to update their understanding of the new standards and to anticipate the implementation challenges the recent changes are likely to pose. To do that, regulators cannot rely exclusively on the supervised entities' auditors. Instead, financial regulators need to develop their own capacity to enforce the standards, independently from other regulation or supervision.

This workshop is organized jointly by the World Bank Centre for Financial Reporting Reform (CFRR) and the IFRS Foundation. It aims to provide senior staff of regulatory agencies with tools and skills to discharge their supervisory duties over banks more effectively.

The workshop will have a specific focus on those new IFRS that must be applied from 1 January 2018; in particular, IFRS 9 Financial Instruments and IFRS 15 Revenue from Contracts with Customers. It will also review the requirements and possible implementation challenges for IFRS 17 Insurance Contracts.

Participants will learn how supervisors can engage more confidently with IFRS-based financial information when reviewing prudential returns.

A board member of the International Accounting Standards Board (IASB), senior IFRS experts, and leading industry practitioners will:

- Provide an understanding of the World Bank vision on how transparency is an essential element for development through leveraging public and private cooperation and financial markets;
- Explore the implementation of new standards, the application of which became mandatory from 1 January 2018, including IFRS 9 Financial Instruments, IFRS 15 Revenue from Contracts with Customers, and IFRS 17 Insurance Contracts;

- Update participants on a range of cross-cutting issues including fair value measurement and disclosure initiatives that aim to improve the decision-usefulness of financial information; and
- Provide an understanding of major new IFRS requirements that have been issued by the IASB with mandatory effective dates later than 2018.

In all sessions dedicated to IFRS, participants will consider examples that are designed to enhance their understanding of the judgments made when applying IFRS, particularly in accounting for financial instruments.
